

Sinclair Broadcasting uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But their decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. When large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for their bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy to work the way it was intended.